New Room Provided At Didsbury School

In order to facilitate the teaching of the new studies in the revised curriculum, the Didsbury School Board are providing another room and have engaged an extra teacher.

An unused room in the public school has been fixed up, with new radiators and desks and other fixtures have been provided.

The school will be divided in three sections; Public School, Junior High and High School, and the first two will be accommodated in the public school building.

The change has been made especially to accommodate the large number of rural students who wish to take advantage of the high standard of educational facilities provided at the Didsbury school.

A full course of studies will be taught which will include all the options in the curriculum.

One of the special features at the school is the "General Shop", which is taught in one of the best-equipped workrooms in the province. The teacher, Mr. Ford, is taking a special course in this study at Peoria, Ill.

The domestic science room, which is equipped with sewing machines, cook stoves and various kinds of cooking utensils, has also been given special attention and girls are given a thorough grounding on home economics.

While the changes will entail an extra expense, the Board is to be commended for making it possible to teach a full course of studies and thus maintain the reputation of the Didsbury Schools for the high standard of efficiency.

Wee Kiddies Help Red Cross

On Friday afternoon last the N. A. Macleod garage was the scene of a neighborhood bazaar, when little Marylee Macleod with her friend Betty Johnson entertained their various companions and a few grown-ups to the good things to be had at a bazaar in the way of refreshment, followed by a short program put on by the kiddies.

The organizing committee also comprised Geraldine Ford, Eddie Lunt and Raymond Johnson.

The proceeds of the afternoon, amounting to 22 cents, was turned over to the local Red Cross secretary, Mr. W. A. Austin.

The kiddies are to be complimented on their patriotism in helping the Red Cross during their play hours.

Geraldine Ford will entertain at a similar function in the near future.

WEDDINGS

BERSCHT-LEVAGOOD

Scarboro' United Church in Calgary was the scene of a pretty wedding Wednesday evening July 31st, when Joyce Elizabeth Levagood, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Levagood, became the bride of Leonard J. Berscht, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Berscht. Rev. H. D. Marr officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white chiffon made on princess lines, with a tucked bolero jacket. The bodice was softly shirred, with tiny buttons extending down the back to the waistline. A coronet of orange-blossoms held her soft net veil in place and she carried a bouquet of Madame Butterfly roses.

The bride was attended by Miss Yvonne Belisle of Calgary, who chose a floor-length model of aquamarine blue organza, also made on princess lines. A doll hat of matching color and a bouquet of pastel pink carnations completed the costume. Mr. Bruce Clarke acted as groomsmen and the ushers were Messrs. Goldwyn Gabel and Fred Evans.

Following the ceremony a reception for 25 guests was held at the Tea Kettle Inn, a three-tiered wedding cake centering the bride's table.

Mrs. Levagood chose for her daughter's wedding a becoming ensemble of dusky-pink crepe, with matching jacket. Her hat was a large model of white straw trimmed navy blue and she wore a corsage of talisman roses.

The groom's mother wore a navy blue jacket frock, trimmed with dusky-pink and large hat to match. A corsage of roses completed her costume.

A wedding trip will be spent at the Pacific Coast, the bride travelling in navy blue and white redingote with navy blue and white accessories.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Berscht will reside at Didsbury.

PHILLIPSON-HARNEY

At a quiet ceremony Saturday evening in St. Stephen's (University) Chapel, Edmonton, Luella Angeline Harney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Harney, of that city, became the bride of Mr. James Ormond Phillipson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Phillipson of Chilliwack, B.C. Dr. McDonald officiated.

Entering the chapel on the arm of her father, the bride was charming in white French chiffon fashioned on princess lines and worn with a matching bolero. She wore a white bridal veil which was held in place by a garland of gardenias and carried a bouquet of opelia roses. Her only ornament was a gold locket, the gift of the groom.

The bridesmaid, Miss Sadie Miller wore a Madeline blue chiffon jacket dress with a floor length bouffant skirt and wore a flowery doll hat in rose and matching blue, carrying a bouquet of rose carnations and blue corn flowers.

Mr. Lorne Anderson was best man and Mr. LaRue Harney acted as usher.

During the signing of the register Miss Doris McWhirter sang the solo "Because."

A reception was held after the ceremony to thirty guests at the Cottage Tea Rooms where Mrs. Harney, mother of the bride, received in a black jacket dress with white accessories and wore a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Phillipson, the groom's mother, wore periwinkle blue and a corsage of pink roses.

The guests from Didsbury were Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Boorman and Mr. Carlton Leeson.

After a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Phillipson will take up residence in Edmonton.

Sundre Stampede Grounds Sold

The Sundre Stampede grounds comprising 80 acres have been sold to A. E. Knott of Knott's Trading Post, Sundre. It is expected that the deal will be completed this week.

There will be a clause in the sale agreement whereby the grounds can be redeemed by the Sundre Stampede Association within a certain time if desired.

As previously stated, the Stampede had a deficit this year of some $500 owing to adverse weather conditions.

It was decided by the directors to sell the land and pay their obligations.

We believe Mr. Knott bought the land in order that the stampede may be continued. However a lot of water will run under the bridge before another stampede time rolls around and anything can happen.

National Registration

On August 19, 20 and 21 a great army of Canadian people, all those, male or female, over the age of 16, will move out to the points of registration and fill in the cards containing a number of questions.

Why is this registration taking place? Our country is at war. It must put up the utmost possible effort to accomplish its purpose and that purpose is to defeat the enemy.

In order to do this it must marshal the full forces of the nation, all the human, moral, material and spiritual forces of Canada.

There can be no slacking. We need more planes, tanks and ammunition. To produce them we need more men, women, materials and money. The nation must produce more, spend less, and to be frank about it, pay more taxes.

Then it is necessary that our young men should be trained for home defence. They will be called up at an early date for a brief period of intensive military training.

Yes, we are at war. Registration means simply, organization for a greater effort for victory. Register early. To answer the questions takes only a few minutes' work if you come prepared to answer. Read the questions in this paper and know the answers you have to make before you go to register. Where so many must give their all you will not hesitate in doing your part.

Bridal Showers

Mrs. Cunningham and daughters, Lois and Alma, entertained on the evening of July 25th, in honor of Mrs. W. Ranton (nee Ruth Gregory). Some twenty-four guests were present, and the evening was spent in interesting games, after which a sumptuous lunch was served. The guest of honor was presented with a well-filled basket of useful gifts, which she graciously accepted and returned thanks.

Some twelve carloads of friends assembled at the Lester Stauffer home, east of town, Tuesday evening to honor Mr. R. J. Rogers and Miss Maudie Stadelbauer, whose marriage will take place shortly.

Tractor lights illumined the large lawn, where numerous games were enjoyed. The midnight hour arrived and a strengthening lunch was served beside a bonfire.

As many as possibly could then entered the house and the guests of honor were recipients of many useful and beautiful gifts, presented by Mrs. C. J. Hallman. Both suitably expressed their thanks.

Mrs. Roland Webster of Westcott gave a shower at her home in honor of Miss Joyce Levagood, whose marriage to Mr. Leonard Berscht took place on Wednesday. Miss Irene Bowdon of Edmonton (who was a guest at the home) took charge of the social activities.

A wagon, which had been artistically decorated with wild flowers by Miss Mary Robertson, and laden with lovely presents, was drawn into the room and presented by little Miss Gladys McDonald. The guest of honour graciously thanked everyone for the gifts, after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

Death Results from Fall

Sam T. Halton, of Lacombe, and brother of our townsman, J. W. Halton, was found dead at the bottom of a basement stairway in a butcher's shop at Lacombe on Thursday last. Mr. Halton had apparently fallen from the top of the stairs and the doctors reported that death was due to concussion.

He was a veteran of the first Great War, past-president of the Lacombe branch of the Canadian Legion, and was manager of the Imperial Oil Limited of that town for five years.

FIT FOR A KING!

A Task For All

If anything were needed to dispel the impression which prevailed among some people in some of the countries of the world that the British were decadent and lethargic in their prosecution of the war, Prime Minister Winston Churchill certainly provided that requisite when he took the drastic but necessary measures which he did to prevent the French fleet falling into the hands of the Germans and the Italians.

True, the battle of Oran was a melancholy affair when, under the instructions of the British government, a section of the British navy had no other alternative but to destroy several units of the fleet of a recently erstwhile ally and in so doing to cause loss of life among those who only two or three weeks beforehand had been fighting alongside them as comrades in a common cause against a common foe.

But, as was pointed out by the press of Great Britain, immediately after this lamentable affair, it would have been unthinkable to allow a single unit of the powerful French fleet to fall into the hands of Hitler and Mussolini, if by any means on earth it could have been prevented. The history of the past six years has demonstrated that Hitler's word is not to be trusted under any circumstances. Indeed Hitler himself, in his book Mein Kampf has told the world that he considers it justifiable to break his pledge if it will result in a gain for Germany.

So that, on his own testimony, confirmed by his subsequent actions, Hitler could not have been believed when he gave his undertaking to the world that the French fleet, while in the custody of Germany and Italy, would be placed in cold storage and not used against Great Britain, after the fall of France.

There is no doubt what would have happened had the British placed a blind and childlike trust in this Hitlerian promise. Within a few days, or a few weeks, a huge armada, comprising the former French fleet and the Italian and German craft would have been engaged in mortal combat with the British fleet in an effort to invade English soil.

It Is To Laugh

It was almost laughable to read of the indignation of the Nazis when they learned of the heroic steps taken by Churchill to prevent the bulk of the great French fleet becoming an adjunct to their own naval, military and air forces and of their "righteous" horror over the action taken at Oran, when they asserted that, because of it, the name of Churchill would be memorialized as the greatest scoundrel in all history, or words to that effect. One can imagine their rage and chagrin when they found that the initiative and courage of Churchill had deprived them of an ace in the hole.

For one thing it proved, not only to Hitler and his Nazis, to Mussolini and his Fascists but to the whole world, that British leadership is not vacillating nor weak; that on the contrary, the leadership in British war effort — and that means our war effort, is vested in men of courage, daring and initiative, and that with such leadership, the Empire, even though alone, will fight to the last ditch and will ultimately conquer. Hitler himself has said that of all foes the British are the most dangerous when aroused. For once Hitler spoke the truth and his followers find that truth unpalatable.

Spirit Still Alive

Not only was Churchill's action at Oran lauded and received with elation in Great Britain and throughout the Empire, but it found justification in the eyes of the whole democratic world, including the United States, where it was accorded practically unanimous approval in the public press, not only on the ground of necessity but of moral rectitude.

Apart altogether from the fact that Churchill's momentous decision and action means easing the burden on the United States of defending her own Atlantic shores against a potential Nazi invasion, the American people recognize now that in Prime Minister Churchill, the Empire has a leader worthy of her great traditions, that the cause of democracy is in safe keeping and that when necessity dictates, Britain can rise to the occasion as might be expected of the descendants of Drake, Raleigh, Wellington and Nelson.

These are names to conjure with and Churchill, whose courage and resourcefulness has never been doubted among his own people, has joined their ranks. Instead of his name going down in history in the ignominious role assigned to him by Hitler his name will be writ as one of that great company of illustrious men who built and helped to maintain intact the greatest Empire the world has ever seen. The spirit of Wellington and Nelson still lives and has its exemplification in Britain and throughout the Empire.

No, the British, nor their scattered offspring throughout the world are not decadent and they will conquer at all costs, but the resourcefulness, initiative and energy of us all must be bent to the task in hand.

Just A Thank You

Story Of How Rescued Scottish Crew Showed Their Gratitude

For 50 hours the crew of the Granton (Scotland) trawler Theresa Boyle shivered in a tiny lifeboat after a Nazi bomber had sunk their ship.

Then the keen eye of an R.A.F. pilot on patrol saw them — exhausted, their boat buffeted by heavy seas.

The plane flew low. There were ten men in the boat. Eight lay on the floor-boards, too weak to row, but just able to wave anxiously to the pilot.

The plane found and guided two minesweepers to the spot. It circled round until the men — the entire crew of the sunken trawler — were taken on board.

Then it flew off. But shortly a signal lamp from one rescue ship recalled the plane.

"Anything wrong?" signalled the pilot.

"No," the reply flickered. "These chaps we picked up just want to say 'Thank you!'" — London Daily Mail.

Secret Ingredients

Research Has Failed To Determine What Butter Fat Is

New research has added a vital chapter to the present knowledge of fats as human food. Nature has devised a product, namely milk or butter fat, which is made of secret ingredients combined by a secret formula. Butter fat has a "something" that other fats cannot claim. It produces better growth and better health than any other fats which have been tested, but what that "something" is has not as yet been definitely determined.

Orders Being Filled

Fires Have Been Re-Lit In London Stained Glass Works

One of the world's leading craftsmen in stained glass put out the fires of his kiln, where the colors are burnt into the glass, and said farewell to his staff when war broke out eight months ago. To-day the fires are re-lit, the staff is re-assembled, and the London workshop is busy satisfying orders from abroad.

The first of the war orders leaves England soon for the United States. It is a great window for St. Paul's School Chapel, Concord, New Hampshire. Another window will shortly be shipped to Canada, where it will adorn the chapel of Wycliffe College, Toronto; another is going to the Scottish Church, Salisbury, Rhodesia, and yet another to St. Mary's Church, Wellington, New Zealand.

The hands which produce the masterpieces in colored glass are those of Reginald Bell. He learnt the art from his father, who learnt it from his own father before him. "The craft of stained glass came from Europe, where the French, Swiss, Dutch, Germans and, later, the Italians, were experts," says Mr. Bell. "But centuries ago it was introduced to Britain, chiefly through the clergy, and it took growth. Craftsmen took so naturally to the art that as early as the 14th century glass painting schools arose all over the kingdom and English stained glass became the most sought after even in the countries of Europe, where it originated, and where it was already tending to decline."

Medallion windows for nurseries, with portraits of animals, are among recent fashions in stained glass, which is by no means confined to church decoration. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

The British Empire Is Engaged In A Grim Battle For The Soul Of Humanity

Sir Gerald Campbell, British High Commissioner to Canada, told a service club Independence Day dinner at Toronto that "we are fighting a battle for the soul of humanity and with God's blessing we will win."

Addressing his concluding remarks largely to Americans in the audience, he said "We have not asked you in the United States for manpower, but for supplies and resources, and your practical response to that has given us great encouragement and immense help; will you add to that, not your fears, but your prayers?"

The Empire was grimly determined to fight to the bitter end for something more than wealth or security or even the continuance of material civilization—the soul of mankind.

"In the name of the father of your country and the son of ours, for the sake of our two Commonwealths free and interdependent, we ask you to say to us 'God bless you; we know you will win'."

Sir Gerald was uneasy about suggestions in the United States that "the game is up and Great Britain is beaten to her knees."

"I got some American papers and found that practically all the military experts seemed to be working overtime to show how we cannot win the war and hardly ever saying anything to show how we can."

"Yes, we know that we of the British Empire stand alone. We know that the situation is dangerous but don't you realize that we have now reached the point that we have been waiting for, and don't you realize that although the bulldog rarely bites, when he does bite he never lets go?"

All reports from Britain said the people were grim and determined.

Reports from the battle zones said the Royal Navy is still supreme, that the Royal Air Force had taken the initiative from the Germans and that the army of the Empire was ready and waiting for the foe in Britain.

"You may say determination is not enough. Maybe it isn't, though what but determination brought Washington through the War of Independence? Determination backed by the forces and equipment which we have at length succeeded in collecting is something which will yet give a good account of itself."

"And we know that many Germans have no joy in their hearts despite all their victories, for it is surely seeping through at what cost those victories have been attained."

"I understand for instance that most of the wounded are being sent into the occupied territories such as Czechoslovakia and Poland, for hospitalization so that they shall not be seen in Germany itself."

Just Be Brief

The editor of the financial page was going to play golf that afternoon.

"I wish you'd take care of our Daily Wall Street Letter," he instructed an assistant. "You know our style, Gonder. Everything boiled down; terse, to the point, nothing but the absolute essentials. I hardly know just what to feature today. Er—what do you think the market will do next?"

"I haven't the slightest idea, sir." "Great! Fine! But remember to be brief, Gonder. See if you can't say that in about fifteen hundred words."

Showing His Gratitude

Coco the Clown whose name has blazed from circus bills all over the world is now Private Nicolai Poliatoff of the British army—in gratitude for the 10 years of prosperity he enjoyed in England. He turned down a $60 a week job with a circus for 50 cents a day as a soldier.

Large Sum Realized

Slaughter Of Buffalo Nets Ottawa Over Sixty Thousand Dollars

At the recent slaughter of surplus buffalo and other animals in western national parks, 4,104 animals were killed, according to a return tabled in the House of Commons in answer to a question from R. H. McGregor (Con., York East).

At Buffalo National park, 2,918 buffalo, 113 moose, 1,806 elk and 242 deer were killed while 18 buffalo were killed at Riding Mountain National park and seven at Prince Albert National park.

A sum of $60,509 was realized from the sale of meat and hides at Buffalo National park. The meat was sold by tender to Canada Packers at $5.75 a hundredweight for choice quality, $4.75 for other good and top medium grades and $2.50 for aged and boner quality, suitable only for processing.

All other meat was made available for Indian relief.

At Buffalo National park 500 specially selected buffalo hides were reserved for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The contractor, Canada Packers, took the balance at $1.50 each, regardless of size or condition.

The seven buffalo hides at Prince Albert National park were used for Indian relief.

All elk, moose and deer hides were reserved for Indian relief and will be used in the Indian handicraft industries.

Saluting The Uniform

Instructions Of Drill Sergeant Taken Literally By Lance-Corporal

The Montreal Star tells this story: A young militiaman who was promoted to lance-corporal very early after being called up was detailed to conduct a party of his comrades on exercise parade, and as they were marching through the small town of — he emphatically gave the order, "Party, eyes right." A moment later, "Party, eyes front." As no officer was passing at the time this caused rather a little consternation, for his comrades had not failed to notice that they were passing the window of a dry cleaner's firm where an officer's uniform was displayed.

The affair was eventually reported to his C.O., and the lance-corporal explained that his drill sergeant's instruction were: Always salute an officer, and don't forget it is not the man you salute, but the uniform.

Lesson From Stonecutter

Merchants Should Learn That Continuous Advertising Bring Good Results

A good paragraph to put before a customer who has grown lukewarm in the matter of continuing his advertising, is the following, credited to Jacob A. Riis: "When nothing seems to help me, I go and look at the stonecutter hammering away at his rock, perhaps as much as a hundred times without as much as a crack showing in it. Yet at the one hundred and first blow it will split in two, and I know it was not that blow that did it, but all the blows that had gone before."

Not Necessary

London Tit-Bits says an R.A.F. man went on a solo reconnaissance flight, and encountered six Messerschmitts, which attacked him. He managed to beat them off.

"But why didn't you send out a radio message for help?" asked a comrade, on his return.

"Oh," he replied, "I thought you only did that when you were in difficulties."

Little More Difficult

Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, the Nazi party's ideologist-in-chief, has announced that German victory in the present war will "put an end to gentlemen" and replace them with the "German work type." Well, the Nazis long ago "put an end to gentlemen" in Germany; but it may be more difficult in countries where the type abounds, says the Buffalo Courier-Express.

London's Crystal Palace

Iron Towers Of Famous Building Being Used For Armaments

Sir Joseph Paxton's Crystal Palace of glass and iron, built to house the Great Exhibition of 1851 in Hyde Park, was set up again on a hill in Sydenham, a little beyond the southern line of the county of London in 1851. Sir Joseph had been the Duke of Devonshire's gardener at Chatsworth. In a way, the conservatory was the model of the palace. This landscape gardener had a genius for order. "I'd like to have him for one of my generals," said Wellington. Something of the good fortune of the Great Exhibition was due to that happy name, Crystal Palace, the gift of Douglas Jerrold, then of Punch.

Another title that seems good American was the Crystal Fountain. At that rendezvous Disraeli met that curiously dressed little old lady who gave him £1000 in an envelope and left him, at her death, £30,000. No such place of wonders was the re-erected hall at Sydenham, but the scene of Handel festivals, Spurgeon preachings, Blondin walking on the tight-rope between the two flanking towers and eating an omelet midway; balloon ascents. It was the first home of the Imperial War Museum. There were flower shows and baby shows, but the prime glory of the place was the fireworks in the park. On Nov. 30, 1936, the great nave, 1,600 feet long, the arcade of glass, 135 feet high, the whole show place went up in fireworks.

Only the two towers were left. Now a London dispatch says that those towers are being torn down so that their 1,600 tons of iron may be used for armament. In 1851 free trade was to spread over a peaceful earth and the golden age to return. Instead is this cruelest of iron ages. Yet that London Fair is still serving civilization. The South Kensington Museum owes its existence to the profits of the Great Exhibition of 1851.—New York Times.

Japan On A Spot

Troops Cannot Advance And Unable To Retreat Says Reporter

W. J. Bowen, Los Angeles reporter, who has just returned from Tientsin, gives an uncensored view of Japan's position in China.

Japan, he says, is stymied in China, facing an embarrassing dilemma because she is unable to go forward, unable to retreat, unable to control efficiently the territory already occupied. This conviction is the outgrowth of my observations for more than a year in China and Japan; and, having just returned from the Orient, this is my first opportunity to express above a whisper, my full opinion.

Japan's army cannot go deeper into free China because she has not the military and economic power to overcome the resistance to her continued advance.

Japan cannot retreat because she would commit national harikiri before she would "lose face."

Japan cannot establish her projected "New Order in East Asia" nor even pacify the Chinese in the areas already occupied and she lacks the numerical strength to police the vast territory, a territory in which every Chinese is a potential guerrilla.

Stiff Tests Necessary In Order To Qualify As Pilots In Royal Air Force

Women Receive Medals

Showed Real Heroism During Forest Fires In Australia

Two heroines of Australian bush fires have been awarded the British Empire Medal for Gallantry and Devotion to Duty, it was announced.

Mrs. Gladys Sanderson was acting postmistress at Noojee, among the Gippsland forests of Victoria, 18 months ago, when bush fires roared toward the town. The townspeople rushed to the river, the last place of safety.

Mrs. Sanderson knew that families isolated in the hills would be destroyed unless they were warned that the fire was racing towards them faster than a horse could gallop through the timber. She alone could operate the switchboard which was the only means of warning them.

She sent her sick father and child to safety and returned to the post-office until she had warned everyone in the hills of the danger.

The medal also went to Mrs. Hilda Constable, postmistress at Meadows, in South Australia, who remained at her post for days, summoning fire-fighters and handling urgent messages during bush fires in 1939. Mrs. Constable left her office only after the fence surrounding the building had been burned to ashes.

Good At Fishing

During Salmon Run Bears In B.C. Show Their Cleverness

Probably the majority of people have never seen a bear fishing for salmon. Nevertheless during the salmon runs, bears in British Columbia put in considerable time fishing along the banks of various small creeks. They are successful, too, in making heavy catches. As a matter of fact, the clever animals are far too successful and in more than one stream their depredations deplete the supplies of salmon reserved for spawning to almost the vanishing point.

To combat this menace to the salmon supply the Dominion department of fisheries has authorized its officers to destroy these marauders when they are encountered during their patrol work in the spawning season. Last year 72 bears were dispatched by two patrolmen and an inspector in the course of their duties on Queen Charlotte Islands. Thirty-nine bears were killed at one point alone. Kitchener Record.

Training Boys For Farm

Scheme Launched By The British Ministry Of Agriculture

The British ministry of agriculture has launched a scheme for training elementary schoolboys for farm work. A total of 2,400 boys will be trained yearly. The young farm apprentices will be paid two shillings, six pence a week with board and lodging. The farmer will take the boy, if satisfactory, into his employment at the end of his training.

These days, when flying is coming into its own in this Dominion, thousands of young Canadians want to be in the Air Force. Airmen say those with an even temperament stand the best chance of enlistment.

For those who want to join the Navy—and thousands more do—the most likely to make the grade are those familiar with the sea, with a knowledge of engines, or men who have had some gunnery practice.

Enlistments in the Royal Canadian Air Force are announced as 1,000 a week. A great many of these are for jobs other than flying, since a man past 28 years and without previous flying experience has little or no chance of becoming a pilot.

A civilian flier, however, even if he approaches the 40-year-old mark may be useful to the R.C.A.F., either ferrying training machines from one centre to another or as an instructor.

Tests for fliers are the stiffest in the armed services. The candidate is given what amounts to a minor psychoanalysis as well as a general physical going-over. And if he is a high-strung individual whose head goes around after dancing the dippy-doodle he won't do for diving a plane at 400 miles an hour.

That's when the speed and air pressure combined sometimes blot out the consciousness of the strongest men for a few seconds. It is called "the blackout", and if the candidate is the type that blacks out easily he would be no kind of pilot.

If physically perfect otherwise the candidate might become an observer or a gunner or he might get in the ground force, but even here the physical requirements are higher than in other branches of the armed services. There are some air force jobs for cooks, instrument repair men, automotive workers, carpenters, metal workers and wireless men.

The R.C.A.F. particularly wants armoureders and for this job no previous experience in armament is required although naturally men with technical skill will find the job of learning about guns, gunights, power-operated turrets, ammunition, bombs and their carriers and pyrotechnics more simple. Here a candidate should have his matriculation papers and recruits should sign on at various recruiting offices throughout the country.

For the present the senior service can do with engineers and captains of ferry boats and other trained mariners. Even the man in the street bright and active, with a mind to learn, can find a connection with the navy.

If the average man happens to hold a third-class stationary engineer's certificate, is a wireless man, a signaller or knows about torpedoes or gunnery or if he is a stoker, he is right down the navy's alley.

If he is none of these he can get on the list of recruits and have preference over late comers when it comes to training in the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer reserve. At training time he gets a preliminary workout for a couple of weeks and then the officers decide whether he should continue or try elsewhere.

If a man joins the R.C.N.V.R. he is not in the same position as though he had joined the non-permanent active militia which calls only for service in Canada. Once in R.C.N.V.R. a man may be called for active service from Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strand.

There are 19 R.C.N.V.R. stations throughout the country and in order to take advantage of training offered there a man has to live within street-car distance.

He drills three nights a week and gets 20 cents a night to cover cost of transportation and shoe polish. It's a stiff grind, but in about six weeks, if he's smart, he has begun to absorb elements of discipline, knows something about squad and rifle drill, can tie some knots, box a compass and read the lights on ships.

The World of Wheat.

By H. G. L. STRANGE

Director, "The Crop Testing Pan."

Dispatches from Ottawa inform us that owing to the lack of elevator space farmers will be required to store some grain for a time at least on their own farms. This means that Elevator Companies and farmers, too, will tend to "plug" or fill up their bins to the limit.

Almost every year, particularly since combining started, some farmers and some Elevator Companies have suffered severe losses because stored grain had become bin burnt, which lowered the grade to "Rejected" and sometimes to no grade at all; this bin burning being brought about because the grain was cut and threshed before it was thoroughly ripe, or the grain contained unripened weed seeds.

The grain in plugged bins is difficult to examine or to "turn," and it is more important than ever that grain for storage this year should be perfectly dry and free from weed seeds. It is evident, therefore, that farmers, particularly those who combine, should this year delay cutting their crops until the grain is thoroughly ripe. Special efforts, too, should be made to see to it that the screens of combines and of threshing machines are kept in proper working order so that weed seeds, which lower grade and take up valuable space, will be removed from the grain.

Following factors have tended to raise price: It has been estimated that 1940 European wheat crops will be 340 million bushels, or about 80 per cent less than last year. - The acreage planted to soybeans in Manchuria is 15 to 20 per cent below last year. - Corn crops in most parts of U.S.A. in urgent need of rain. - Searle crop report estimates condition of prairie wheat 82 per cent of normal.

Following factors have tended to lower price: Harvesting of wheat in the Balkins is progressing under favorable conditions -- Harvesting of wheat in U S A. is progressing under ideal conditions -- British intend tightening blockade against foodstuffs and other materials reaching Germany through Spain.

TOT'S COOL PINAFORE OUTFIT

By Anne Adams

There's a scrubbed-and-shining appeal to the pinafore, most beguiling of little-girl fashions. Anne Adams offers her enchanting version in Pattern 4330—a cool pinafore that's useful as a sun-dress, worn with panties beneath, or as an apron to wear over other frocks. It buttons down the back and may have a saucy back bow. The matching or contrasting ruffles that spring out from the bodice look gay with ruffles. The brief skirt is full and gathered. To complete the picture, there's an eye-shading sunbonnet of self-fabric or a pretty color. Simple panties that are cut in one piece are included in this quickly-made style.

Pattern 4330 is available in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 sunbonnet and pinafore takes 2½ yards 35 inch fabric and 3 yards ruffles.

Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly: Size, Name, Address and Style Number and send orders to the Anne Adams Pattern Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermot Ave. E., Winnipeg.

Mayor H. E. Rice of Huntsville, Ont., publisher of the Huntsville "Forester," was elected president of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association at the annual convention at Calgary.

Editors In Convention

Papers From All Parts Of Canada Represented At Calgary Meeting

More than 200 newspaper editors and owners from all parts of Canada, representing all shades of editorial opinion and almost every type of Canadian, gathered in Calgary for the two-day convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association. The agenda included reports, discussions, addresses and entertainment. H. T. Halliwell of Coleman, Alta., president of the association, presided at all sessions.

Part of the weeklies in promoting the spirit of patriotism and support of the government in these trying times was pointed out by Mr. Halliwell in his report. "The city or metropolitan dailies provide the news service covering world events, but when it comes to the intimate touch in arousing people's interests, the editorial pen of the weekly editor can and does accomplish much. We must at all times try and improve our services to our readers so that the weekly newspaper is a vital force in the community," he said.

Weekly newspapers were giving free publicity to the War Savings Certificates campaign and other worthy causes, he said.

The meeting closed officially with a banquet and dance at which awards and trophies were presented. Guest speaker was W. Frank Prendergast, assistant to the president of Imperial Oil Ltd., Toronto.

The executive follows: Past president, H. T. Halliwell, Coleman, Alta.; president, H. E. Rice, Huntsville, Ont.; first vice-president, Walter Ashfield, Grenfell, Sask.; second vice-president, Walter Legge, Granby.

Que.; managing director, C. V. Charters, Brampton, Ont.

Galbraith, Red Deer; Harry Ford, Lacombe, Saskatchewan; S. J. Dornan, Alameda; S. N. Wynn, Yorkton; Cameron McIntosh, North Battleford, Manitoba; H. G. Franklin, Roland; H. B. Sightless Fish

Are Found In Waters Of Caverns Over Wide Areas

When a deep artesian water well was brought in recently in Southern California's sub-sea-level Coachella Valley, up with the flowing water came thousands of tiny, fresh water fish without even a trace of rudimentary eyes. Ichthyologists identified them as a species previously known to natural science, a species allied to the sightless fish of Mammoth Cave, in Kentucky, and found in the waters of several other great caverns in widely-separated parts of the earth.

Their discovery in the artesian well bored to a depth of 1,400 feet indicates the existence of a subterranean river or lake under the Coachella Valley where the fish have survived through the thousands of years it has taken for adaptation to environment to transform them into an eyeless species. Christian Science Monitor.

Triumph Short-Lived

German Admiral Knew How Quickly Victory Turns To Defeat

It is always darkest before the dawn and times of triumph are often the most dangerous to the victors. Britain is now experiencing dark hours and Germany her greatest military triumph. The present situation calls to mind the events following the Battle of Coronel off the Chilean coast during the Great War of 1914-18, when a German fleet under Admiral Von Spee sank a British squadron under Admiral Craddock.

Following the victory the German ships steamed triumphantly to a Chilean port where the natives gave an enthusiastic reception to the victors. During the evening a group of ladies, it was reported, presented the admiral with a victory bouquet.

Von Spee thanked the donors and then, surveying the flowers, made the disconcerting reply: "They will do for my funeral."

"But, admiral, you've had a great triumph," one of the ladies answered.

"Yes," responded the admiral. "But when did Britain ever leave an enemy to his triumph?"

In a few months after that event the gallant admiral found a grave in the waters of the south Atlantic, he and his bouquet and his ships and his triumph all wiped out together.

The admiral's memory was revived by the present German regime in the sea raider "Graf Spee". She also had her triumph, and, ominously, she also found doom in the South Atlantic.

There is a great lesson in this to all who allow their feelings to bob up and down with every passing phase of a great conflict. The calm soul keeps poise and weighs each event, as far as is humanly possible, at its true value, never anticipates disaster, and only accepts it when it really comes. Then having accepted it reorients the situation with a new and firmer resolve for victory. Toronto Evening Telegram.

For British War Effort

Woman Donates Diamonds Which Brought Nearly $108,500 At Auction

A necklace of 42 diamonds presented anonymously to the government by a woman to help the British war effort was sold at Christie's, London auctioneers, for £24,400 (nearly $108,500).

Experts were amazed at the magnificence of the stones, which are set in individual collets, each separated by small twin diamonds mounted transversely. The large centre diamond is connected with these on either side by smaller circular diamonds and supports twin chains, each composed of three large and four smaller circular diamonds. The clasp consists of a single circular diamond and two smaller twin diamonds, mounted transversely.

Christie's believes the necklace is the "most superb we have ever had to sell". The identity of the woman donor remains a secret.

Three billion of the four billion British coins in circulation are copper.

Along The Roof Of The Continent

From Jasper Park Lodge the highway leads to the foot of Athabasca Glacier (right), where is located the new Columbia Icefield chalet. Near by are Snow Dome, Kitchener and other glaciers, all welded into one inseparable mass, banding these mountains which tower more than 11,000 feet skywards. On these glaciers unexcelled summer skiing may be enjoyed and it is here that some of the continent's outstanding men and women skiers train for Canadian and international events.

The completion of the Columbia Icefield Highway marks another chapter in the history of Jasper National Park, 4,200 square miles in extent. The Canadian National Railways Jasper Park Lodge in this, America's largest National Park, now offers visitors every modern luxury where in the early days explorers, traders and trappers, set up their primitive camps.

One night it happened that he found himself walking along the street at the back of Fotheringay Mansions and, looking up, noticed a bright light burning behind the green blind in an upper room. Mr. Ingle's apartment was very easily located. There was a narrow parapet to identify the height; the lumber room where the light showed was four windows from the firescape.

Now Jim Carlton understood. This was the sound he had heard; the whirl of a cinematograph projector!

"He took it up and left it. I asked him if Mr. Jackson was taking on film work, but he said nothing—the man who brought it, I mean. Of course, if I knew for certain that he had any celluloid stored on the premises, I'd have to report it. Those things are not allowed in the building."

Jim listened without hearing. He was dumfounded by the discovery. Every man has his secret weakness, but though he had credited Mr. Arthur Ingle with many peculiarities, he had never suspected him of a passion for the screen.

Elk was waiting outside, the stub of a cigar between his teeth, a large, unfurled umbrella in his hand, and in a few words Jim told him what he had learned.

"Pitchers!" said Elk, shaking his head. "Never thought he would lower himself to that! Queer thing how these crooks sort of run to weakness one way or the other. I knew a man, the cleverest safebreaker in Europe, who'd risk a lagging to get a game of ping-pong! There was another fellow named Moses who had the finest long-firm business in England."

"Let us go around and look at the back of the house again," Jim interrupted the reminiscences ruthlessly.

The bright light was showing again, clear through the dark green blinds, but even as he looked it was extinguished, but when his eyes became accustomed to the darkness he could see the reflected glow of another light. It was in this room then that Mr. Ingle was engaged in his new hobby.

Jim looked naturally at the firescape. There was a wall to be scaled or, easier perhaps, a door into the courtyard of the building might be opened with one of his keys. But the door needed no forcing; it was unlocked and gave easy entry to a stone-paved yard, whence a flight of iron stairs led up to the roof. An iron bar was fastened across the rails at the bottom, for what purpose was not clear, since it was positively not aroused the inmates and blankets at the foot of the bed. Yet only on the wireless. I shall have a little to get either over or beneath it.

"Maybe it's to keep it airtight," suggested Elk, or to trip up the fellers who are not burnt to death. Going up?"

Jim nodded, and Inspector Elk followed him from landing to landing until they came level with the floor on which Mr. Ingle's flat was situated. Without a word Jim Carlton swung himself over the rail and, balancing precariously upon the narrow ledge of stone, felt forward and gripped the nearest window sill. Progress in front of the windows was an easy matter to one with his nerves; it was in the intervening spaces where he had to depend for his life upon a fine sense of balance, that the danger lay. Elk watched him anxiously as he moved nearer and nearer to the window, flattening himself against the wall and edging forward inch by inch; in this perilous fashion he came sidling to the window from behind which came the ceaseless rattle of the projector.

The moment he reached his objective Jim knew that his effort had been in vain. Behind blind and window he could see the small projector at work, was dazzled by the flicker of the light, and Arthur Ingle showed clearly in the glow thrown back from the invisible screen. He was turning the handle, his eyes staring at the picture which he was projecting, and the first thing the detective noticed was that Mr. Ingle was in need of a barber, for his face was covered with a ragged white stubble and his gray hair was long and unkempt.

But what was the picture he was viewing so intently? Jim screwed his head round, but on the left-hand side of the window the blind ran flush with the sash. There was nothing to do but to make his way back, and noiselessly he edged toward the fire ladder.

He had not gone more than half-way before he had a shock. He felt a stone yield beneath his feet, the edge broke off and fell into the courtyard below. It might be one rotten piece, he argued, but stepped more gingerly. If the parapet gave under his weight while he was traversing a wall space nothing could save him from death; but he did not allow his mind to dwell upon this aspect of the adventure.

He had reached the window nearest to the iron stairs and was feeling cautiously along with his feet when, without warning, the narrow parapet beneath him cracked. He managed to grip the wooden window and in another second was hanging with his legs in space. He heard Elk's agitated whisper, saw the elderly detective thrust up the crook of his umbrella, but knew that this was beyond his reach.

There was only one nope. Taking off his soft felt hat he put his hand inside and drove straight at the glass of the window. The shock of the blow almost dislodged him, but clearing off the broken edge of glass, he took a firm grip of the window sash and drew himself up. A second pane was broken in the same way and, reaching in, with some difficulty he turned the window catch and pushed up the sash. In another second he was in a room. He stopped to listen. The smashing of the glass had evidently not aroused the inmates and he passed out the news to the agitated Elk.

"I don't know whose flat it is," he whispered. "Meet me at the front of the building."

Tiptoeing across the room, he felt for the light and turned it on. He was in a small bedroom, which had evidently not received the attention of a housemaid for a very considerable time, for dust lay thick upon the furniture and upon the folded blankets at the foot of the bed. Yet the room was handsomely furnished, the general furnishing of Ingle's and in a style that harmonized with apartment. Evidently this was one of the rooms which he had not visited.

He opened the door carefully. The dining hall was in darkness; from the lumber room came the ceaseless chinkety-click of the projector.

Should he risk being discovered and satisfy his curiosity? It was almost worth while. As he debated the point, the telephone, which was in the dining room, rang noisily, and he drew back into the room, pulling the door close behind him. He heard the snap of the button as Ingle turned on the lights.

Nazi Prisoners Show Their Cowardice When Subjected To Bombs

True and perhaps instructive. A traveller in a convoy carrying evacuated soldiers to a British port was asked how he stood the constant aerial bombing to which the ships were subjected. "It would have been all right," he said, "if it hadn't been for the German prisoners. We had to take forcible steps to silence them, or they would have quite unnerved us."—London Spectator.

Oppose Amendment to Wheat Board Act

Opposition is being voiced to the provisions in the act amending the Wheat Act, which provides that this year the basis of initial payment to farmers of 70 cents for No. 1 wheat shall be in store Fort William, instead of in store at both Vancouver and Fort William as was provided in the Act of 1939.

In a telegram sent to the members of parliament by the United Grain Growers Ltd., it is pointed out that "by the alteration now proposed a blow is struck at Alberta farmers which threatens to reduce the amount they will receive in initial payments from the Wheat Board by varying amounts up to five and a half cents a bushel on their wheat. This will not only be disastrous to farmers of the province but will seriously impair the whole business structure in Alberta."

The change proposed at Ottawa would mean a reduction of 4.2 cents per bushel on wheat delivered to the Wheat Board at Didsbury.

Teachers Wanted.

Threat of a shortage of school teachers may develop in Alberta, it was indicated when two or three rural inspectors were at the department of education summer school seeking teachers for the next term. Extent, if any, of the shortage will not be known definitely until late in the summer, but it is expected that any deficiency can be made up from the ranks of former teachers. There are approximately 6,000 teachers in Alberta with the two provincial normal schools together graduating about 600 new teachers per year.
